DSU Master-level University degrees in Law specifically designed for foreign students

Université Panthéon-Assas, part of the Sorbonne and successor of the Paris Faculty of Law, is located in the heart of Paris, in the Latin quarter, since the XII century.

Considered as the top University in the field of Law in France, Assas created specific Master-level juridical degrees designed especially for international students.

The DSU is addressed to students who hold already a degree in legal studies in their home countries.

Why join a DSU?

The DSU combines introductory courses in French law and methodology as well as courses in the chosen specialization of law and French language courses for foreign students.

The DSU offers a complementary qualification to initial higher education training and can also constitute a most adapted preparatory year for students aiming to enter a second year Master's degree in France.

The programme

Students are required to complete a general programme on basic knowledge of French private and public law and methodology that is common to all DSU.

In addition, based on the DSU, students will attend in parallel 3 specialization courses. Finally, DSU students benefit from French language courses, adapted to their level, throughout the academic year.

Six specializations are available:

- Administrative law
- Business and corporate law
- Civil law
- International private law
- International public law
- European Union law

Admission

Candidates must:

- have good quality academic records and hold a legal degree equivalent to a French first year Master's degree.
- have a B2 level of French language knowledge (Common European framework of reference for languages).
